Judy Irving, Master Coach, corporate trainer and owner of Moving On Coaching and Consulting describes herself as a

"recovering, stressed-out superwoman" who thought success WAS working hard. The harder she worked, the more successful she felt, but the cost was too great. She was always searching for more. Finally when tired of searching and tired while searching, she says, I learned to question my intentions, commitments and my sense of purpose. This questioning led me to A Course In Miracles®, which she credits with giving her the tools to deal with what she shares in this book: her mother's murder. Irving's life is now dedicated to assisting others in transforming the way they look at life and in giving them the tools to do so.
